

Abstract

A display device has a rotatable display object suspended in it. The display object is tethered at one end to a rotating motor shaft. The other end is suspended by a magnetic field between a magnet affixed to a support and another magnet affixed to the other end.

5. When the shaft rotates, the display object also rotates. The display object can also be made to wobble, reciprocate or reverse directions.